July 2009

CarbonSense is a leading independent think tank and innovator in the field of carbon analysis, strategy and climate communication. CarbonSense also provides research and training for business and the public sector.

Carbon Quilt

The Carbon Quilt is our new visual communication tool. Developed with partner GovEd Communications, it can help make sense of the world's carbon footprint. It can be used to enhance communication at personal, organisational and inter-governmental levels. Try it out and give us your feedback. Help make the Carbon Quilt a useful tool in negotiations at the UN Climate Change conference in Copenhagen.

Getting the message across

CarbonSense recently completed a series of workshops for environmental champions at Transport for London in collaboration with associates Theatre4Business. The workshops combined a lively and interactive personal communication development process with a rich vein of information around climate change and related sustainability issues using imagery and stories.

US cities start to take action

Written by CarbonSense for the Carbon Disclosure Project and ICLEI, the CDP Cities Project report was launched on 8th July. Eighteen cities spread across the US demonstrated leadership by disclosing their emissions and other climate change information. Targets are being set and reductions planned. The report sets out an analysis of findings and indicates the scale of the challenge ahead.
